and, here in the midsummer, we find such features as Quales collars, gaunt-let cuffs and uneven skirts completely upsetting the equilibrium of eatablished styles.

The soft, low collars come as a beast diction after the up-to-the-cars stocks. The swift reverse of the style from one extreme tothe other is more than a mere whim of Fashion. Women, by their grudging homage to the high collar, were, as ever, the wedge that forced the mode. Indeed, the American woman has been so humored by past fashions, it is not surprising that she refuses to be marrived to the stock. The broad Quaker and deep pointed Puritan or Swiss, and the less er collars that grow out of those two, are far more likely styles for the warm weather.

If you intend being really well dressed, wear one of these and look to you; cuffs as well as your collar. "Gauntlet" is the live-wire at present—the last word in cuffs. There is no need to describe the style, the name implies its sleeve-protecting appearance. Today this is the extreme; tomorrow, when its newness is rubbed off by wearing, it will join the ranks of the regular summer fashion, along with the organdy and Swiss turnback cuffs that match the Quaker and Puritan collars and the sheer inner sleeves that show below the "Castle" sleeves of taffeta.

Skirts mark the divergence of the mode. These defy all known rules of Fashion, and dip and hike; in fact, do everything, except what is expected of them. Open-front overskirts are longer than the foundations they are

Will Play Final Game in Spirits Gelf Tournament

The last part of the eliminati of the Bryan Golf Club tourn was played yesterday afternoon on the links at Hillerest with a good crowd present. After very good exhibitions of golf. A. K. Brown and F. E. Hood won out over their opponents, J. S. Doane and Dr. W. B. Citae. Mr. Brown made the best score for the afternoon, completing the two rounds of the links in 111 strokes. He was closely followed by Mr. Hood with 114.

The players were not matched yesterday, but the two players making the best scores for the afternoon were declared the winners and are to be the contestants in the final match, which is to be played this af-

Both Dr. Cline and Mr. Donne were off form yesterday afternoon and made lower scores than at any other time during the tournament.
